

Employment support

'Trigger point conversation' – for staff and volunteers

Why is employment support important?

Paid employment is one of the quickest routes out of poverty, but it also has many other benefits. Work can have a positive impact on people's wellbeing and health by helping to boost confidence, increase social interactions and provide opportunities to develop new skills. In addition, the Government are making big changes to the benefits system to make sure that "work pays". This means that for many unemployed people finding paid work is now essential.

Let's talk about employment

For some people the transition into employment can be a worrying prospect. If we make it our business to talk to our residents about money and employment, we can better understand the barriers they face, and in turn can support them to overcome those issues. You can start conversations about employment by asking questions such as:

- What are the reasons for you not being in employment?
- Are there any barriers that are stopping you from working at the moment?
- What support do you feel you need to find employment?
- Is there a money related reason why you wouldn't accept a job?

This information sheet describes some of the help available for residents looking to increase their employment opportunities or find work.

Reminder about the Claimant Commitment and individual responsibilities

The Claimant Commitment is an agreement drawn up between Jobcentre Plus and a resident claiming Jobseeker's Allowance or Universal Credit. It sets out the agreed steps that a resident will need to take to prepare for work in return for receiving benefits. It is important to remind residents:

- To be as honest as possible with Jobcentre Plus work coaches about what they can and can't do when agreeing their Claimant Commitment because failure to carry out the actions identified could lead to a benefit sanction
- To be on time for their appointments. If they are unable to make it, or think they will be late, then they should contact their jobcentre as soon as possible. Doing this could also help to avoid a benefit sanction

Newcastle City Council and Jobcentre Plus are working together to try and reduce the number of adverse benefit sanctions awarded in Newcastle. As part of this approach we hold quarterly workshops for staff and volunteers to highlight ways that they can support residents to avoid benefit sanctions. For details of future workshops, visit www.newcastle.gov.uk/financialinclusionforprofessionals

'Better off' calculations and in-work benefit entitlement

'Better off' calculations are used to compare the income a household receives from benefits with the income they could earn from being in employment. To use a benefits calculator, visit www.gov.uk/benefits-calculators

Residents with a low income job or working part-time may be entitled to additional financial support through in-work benefits.
